

Diane Brown is President of the Board of 7 Star Therapeutic Riding (“7 Star”). In her day job, she is Project Manager for a wind project in the Oklahoma Panhandle. Diane’s involvement in 7 Star comes from a love of horses and the desire to help people. She was co-founder of an equine therapy non-profit in Edmond, Oklahoma which used horses to help children and adults with speech difficulties. Diane loves the mission of 7 Star and would like to grow the organization to help many more people because it makes such a difference in people’s lives and helps a wide range of physical and mental problems from bullying to PTSD. She believes anyone who is involved in therapy using horses will be amazed at the progress and the outcome! Diane and her husband live in Amarillo and they have two daughters, one son-in-law and one grandson all who live in the Dallas area.
